

Types of Saddles

(USPC D Manual p.293)

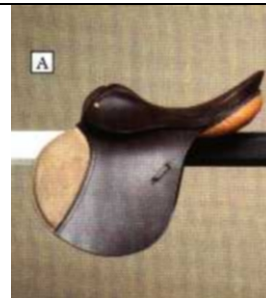

Name: Teacher Copy

Date: _____

Western Saddle	Say whatever you want... Research what kind of western saddle we can use for the new USPC sport of Reining.
Australian Stock Saddle	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> *Built for comfort *Deep seat *May have a small horn *Also called a "Poley"
Saddle Seat	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> *Big flat seat *Larger flaps *Sets rider seat back and places legs in front * Also called a "Lane Fox", and "Park Saddle" * Used on gaited horses
Racing Saddles	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> * Thin, light weight * Just to hold the stirrups * The most forward saddle * Sets riders body over withers and onto neck
Polo Saddle	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> *Deeper seat *higher cantle *standard flaps but no knee roll *Deep seat sets rider back. * not for jumping *light and very little padding
Flat Jumping Saddle	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> *Also called "close contact" *Shorter and more forward flap. *Popular in the hunter ring *Designed to ride in two point

Forward Seat

*Similar flap to Flat Jumping Saddle, but slightly deeper seat.
*Forward cut flap to allow for shorter stirrup length
*Popular for Foxhunting

Side Saddle

Say whatever you know...

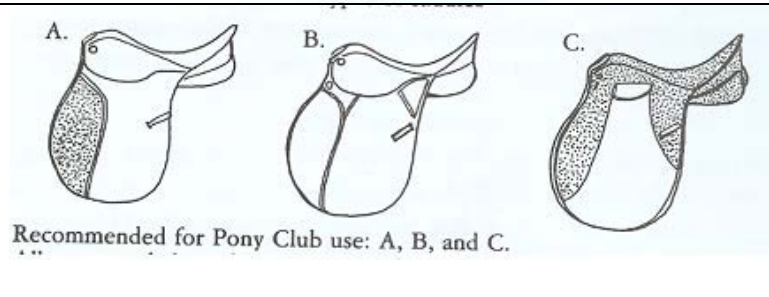

Dressage Saddle

Never for Jumping
Straight, long flaps
Less stuffing to allow close contact with mount

All Purpose/Balanced Seat Saddle

Endurance Saddle

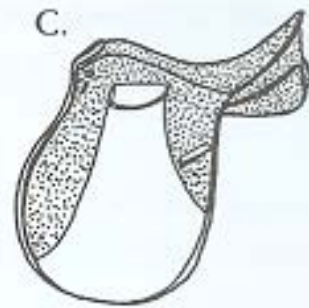

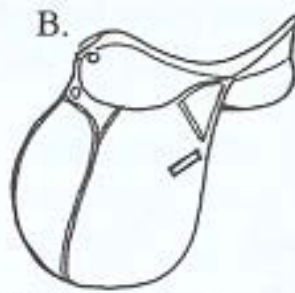

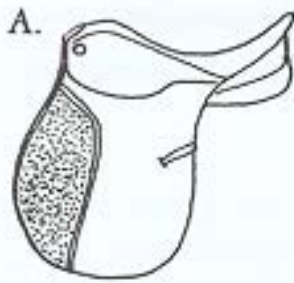

*Lightweight and extra padding
*Designed for comfort for both horse and rider
*Used to ride long distances

Designed by the Shore Riders Pony Club, 2010

Types of saddles

Recommended for Pony Club use: A, B, and C.
All-purpose, balanced seat saddles (leather or synthetic).

D. Flat jumping saddle

E. Forward seat jumping saddle

F. Dressage saddle

D and E are less suitable for balanced seat riding and are best for jumping only.

Suitable for dressage only.
Do not use for jumping.

G. Old-fashioned park saddle

H. Saddle seat show saddle

G and H are unsuitable for balanced seat riding and jumping.